

How important is metal detection when buying reclaimed rags?

The answer depends on how long you want to keep that customer you worked so hard to get!

Selecting the cheapest rag option sometimes gives you unexpected and even dangerous results. Reclaimed rags come from a lot of sources — foreign material is occasionally recycled in to rags after its original use.

What else gets tossed in or caught up in the pile of material when being shipped off to the recycler? Razor blades... needles... pins... nails... and yes, even knives. Plus the rag itself may have metal buttons, zippers or buckles. Our studies indicate that as much as 5% of all reclaimed rags contain detectable metal. Don't let your customer be the one who opens that box of rags.

All reclaimed rags are scanned for metal (and in most cases scanned twice!).
